

What's volunteering got to do with doing business?

What it doesn't mean is having your hand in your pocket!

Let's talk about how we can assist your business improve its bottom line. Overseas experience shows that for little expenditure you can derive great benefits for your business and your staff. Those benefits can translate into better business outcomes or simply better staff morale. Here are a few suggestions:-

- introduction of a corporate or employee volunteering program
- recognise staff who already volunteer in the community
- provide information about community activities to staff
- form mutually beneficial partnerships with a community group
- register your staff on our pro bono data base
- brand your business as a business which cares about it's community
- be recognised in our annual Business Awards

Become one of the increasing number of businesses in Australia which are reaping the benefits of these types of activities.
